NORWAY MOBILIZES ANOTHER DIVISION; EMBARKS ON FULL MILITARY COOPERATION WITH BRITAIN; HAVE REOCCUPIED HAMAR

German Advance Along Northern Railroad Near Narvik Has Been Halted—Report That British Warships Have Sunk 12 of 20 German Troopships in The Skagerrak

(By International News Service)

Norway mobilized another army division today, and embarked upon full military co-operation with Great Britain after ousting the German invaders from a number of strategic sea points.

Shortly after noon, the military situation appeared to be as follows:

Norwegian troops have reoccupied Hamar. The German advance along the northern railroad, near Narvik, has been halted. It was reported without confirmation that British troops had dislodged the Germans from Narvik itself.

Simultaneously, Reuter's again reported that Norwegian troops had retaken the port of Bergen.

LONDON, Apr. 11—British warships had sunk 12 of 20 German troopships in the Skagerrak, Reuter's reported today.

Germany today claimed to hold Norway firmly in its grip, despite 48 hours of continuous fighting.

Further negotiations are expected to take place between the Nazi minister to Norway and King Haakon to "clear up German-Norwegian relations."

Meanwhile, Stockholm reported King Haakon formally refused to accept the puppet government at Oslo, set up by Norwegian Nazi leader Quisling.

A German Foreign Office spokesman denied that negotiations with Norway have been definitely broken off. He also stressed that no state of war exists between Norway and the Reich, inasmuch as Norway has not notified Germany to that effect.

LEGIONNAIRES WILL AID NURSING SERVICE FUND

Sanford Post of Morrisville To Conduct Drive for The Red Cross

SEEK AMOUNT OF $1,387

MORRISVILLE, Apr. 11—The Willet C. Sanford Post, No. 433, American Legion, will finance a drive for funds for the Morrisville Red Cross, to continue the community nursing service.

Chairman Harry Lair and his committee, composed of Marcus B. Ketcham, John Gear, Leo Smith and Russell Willoughby, announced today the drive would be held the latter part of this month. Every home and business in the Morrisville sector will be canvassed by the Legionnaires in the hope of raising $1,387.20, the required amount.

This drive is being conducted by the local post for the third time.

The community nursing service in Morrisville is of inestimable value and every day conducts worthwhile services on behalf of the underprivileged in Morrisville and surrounding towns.

Chairman Lair will shortly announce the dates for the canvass.

William and Mary College Band Plays at County Seat

DOYLESTOWN, Apr. 11—The College of William and Mary band, from Williamsburg, Va., made its initial appearance in Doylestown, last evening, the concert being sponsored by the Doylestown Parent-Teacher Association.

Through the co-operation of Frank Damosch, 3rd, son of the Rev. and Mrs. Frank Damosch, Jr., the Virginian collegians, whose band is one of the best of the Eastern college organizations, made its initial visit here.

Accommodations for the 40 young men were arranged with various county seat families. The college boys received their supper, night's lodging and breakfast for their recital.

Cornwells Has The First Explorers Troop in Bucks

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, Apr. 11—The Cornwells Boy Scouts are proud to announce they have a senior patrol, namely, "The Explorer Scout Patrol," the first explorers troop in Bucks county.

It consists of the following members: Herman Reif, scribe; Samuel Thomas, patrol leader; John Thomas, assistant patrol leader; Louis Steinbach, patrol leader; Joseph Kish, C. Emmett.

The leader is Harry Vandergrift, Bristol, who was asked to take charge of the boys.

Thursday night is target practice for the senior boys. On Saturday they will have a bake sale at the corner of Williams street and Bristol pike.

These Scouts have formed an emergency corps, and are ready to take part in any way they can to help flood-stricken areas. Any needing their help kindly get in touch with the troop.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

Mr. Byrd Asks The Facts

Washington, April 10.

IT is not surprising that Senator Harry F. Byrd, of Virginia, should be unpopular with the policy-forming New Dealers, who constitute the well-known "inner circle" and whose itch to hold on to their well-paid jobs is the real motive power of the third-term movement.

NOR is it surprising that Mr. Roosevelt, personally, should lose his ardor when the name of Senator Byrd is mentioned in his presence, though there seems no excuse for the sort of temper he occasionally has displayed. The fact is that, more consistently and determinedly than any other Senator, Mr. Byrd has opposed the basic New Deal policy, which is spending, and more effectively in-

C. F. Derstine, Doylestown, R. D. No. 1, exhibited a Leghorn egg which weighed six ounces and was larger than a goose egg. The egg apparently contains a full-size egg, with a shell, inside of it.

The egg measured nine and one-eighths inches in circumference the long way and seven and three-quarter inches in circumference around the middle.

Mr. Derstine, who has found four or five other eggs similar in size and formation in the same pen, believes the same hens lay the freak eggs.

Approximately 500 persons attended the seventh annual Spring concert of the North Penn Male Chorus and a Cappella Choir, which was presented in the auditorium of Sellersville-Perkasie high school.

The chorus and choir, which are under the direction of Cecil Lapp, of the Westminster Choir School, were assisted by the Dorothy E. Rosenberg Trio of Lancaster, presenting selections on the marimba, celeste and violin.

An added feature of the program was a playlet, "Beautiful Dreamer," built around incidents in the life of Stephen Foster. Many of his compositions were sung by a chorus of stage during the presentation.

The playlet was written and directed by Mrs. H. Clayton Moyer, of Blooming Glen, who was also a member of the small cast. Others who had parts in the production were Miss Lillian McAllister, Miss Harriet Heavener and Mrs. Walter Hendricks.

Four members of the male chorus joined their voices in several quartet selections, which were added features of the concert. The quartet consisted of Willard Shaddinger, Albert Ziegenfuss, Jr., Harley Hunsicker and Joseph Sine.

The theft of about 60 chickens from a hen house on the farm of Mr. and Mrs. Harry J. Grabert, Ferry Road, Doylestown township, has been reported to the Doylestown sub-station of the Pennsylvania Motor Police.

When the Graberts went to feed the chickens on Friday morning they discovered the doors open and between 55 and 60 of the flock of 400 birds missing.

The raid was made some time Thursday night, and it is not believed that any other chicken houses in the neighborhood were molested.

JOINT AFFAIR MARKED BY PRESENTATION OF SWORD

Joseph A. Schumacher Post Receives Gift in Memory of Charles Schumacher

DINNER FOR MRS. TYLER

A dinner honoring Mrs. Betty Tyler, retiring president of the Ladies' Auxiliary of Joseph A. Schumacher Post, Veterans of Foreign Wars, took place last evening in the headquarters of Schumacher Post No. 1597, near Croydon. Thirty witnessed the program offered at the joint affair, in which members of both the post and Auxiliary participated.

To Mrs. Tyler, who has served in that capacity for one year, a pair of boudoir lamps was presented on behalf of the Auxiliary by Mrs. J. Oliver Bowers, treasurer.

Another feature of the evening was the presentation to the post of a sword by Fred Schumacher, brother of the late Joseph A. Schumacher in whose honor the post is named. The sword was used by Mr. Schumacher's grandfather in cavalry service during the Civil War. It later became the property of a son, the late Charles Schumacher, who requested that upon his death, the Schumacher Post receive same. So last evening a member of the third generation made the presentation in memory of his father, the late Charles Schumacher. The gift was accepted by Commander of the post, Herman Pluma, and will be hung in the meeting room. Other gifts were also presented by Mr. Schumacher to both the post and Auxiliary.

Other guests of the evening were Mrs. Fred Schumacher, Bristol Township; and Mr. and Mrs. R. Montayne, Bethayres. Mrs. Montayne, a district official, briefly addressed the gathering. Mr. Montayne is commander of Forest Lodge Post, V. F. W., of Perkasie.

The dinner menu included: Fried chicken, mashed potatoes, green peas, celery, pickles, rolls, cake, coffee, candy, mints. Favors were miniature floor lamps, made of candy.

Prior to the evening festivities each group conducted a brief business session with election of officers. The Post named the following as officials: Commander, John Dea, succeeding Mr. Pluma; senior vice commander, Charles U. Pierce; junior vice commander, Frank Clifford; quartermaster, George N. Distler; chaplain, the Rev. Andrew George Solla; officer of the day, J. Oliver Bowers; delegate to

BUCKS COUNTY REALTORS MARK 10TH ANNIVERSARY

Dinner and Publicity Conference Held in Fountain House, Doylestown

GEO. F. KEARNEY SPEAKS

Editor and President of Phila. Evening Ledger Gives Many Valuable Suggestions

DOYLESTOWN, Apr. 11—The Bucks County Real Estate Board last night marked its 10th anniversary with a dinner and publicity conference held in the Fountain House, here. There were approximately 60 representative realtors, building association directors, business men and bankers in attendance from the various sections of the county.

The speaker of the evening was George F. Kearney, president and editor of the Philadelphia Evening Ledger. Mr. Kearney, while now living in Philadelphia, has a home at Andalusia.

Following the dinner there was a conference held at which time Mr. Kearney gave valuable suggestions as to how to publicize Bucks County.

The guests were welcomed by Hon. Thomas B. Stockham, president of the association. Mr. Stockham called attention to the fact that all of the past presidents of the association were in attendance. Briefly he sketched the history of the organization, growth and development of the association from the date of its organization March 19, 1930. The organization meeting was held in the Fountain House where the 10th anniversary was celebrated. J. Carroll Molloy, Doylestown, was the first president.

At the conclusion of the historical resume, Mrs. Martha S. Woolley carried to the speaker's table a birthday cake with 10 red candles lighted. The cake was presented to Mr. Stockham.

Mr. Molloy, the first president, was then invited to take charge of the meeting, and introduced a number of the guests including Judge Hiram H. Keller, of the Bucks County Courts; Hon. Wilson L. Yeakel, assemblyman from Bucks County; Harry Hart, secretary of the Pennsylvania Real Estate Association; Edward R. Kirk, treasurer of Bucks County Real Estate Board; Charles Hupp, for many years secretary of the Bucks County Real Estate Board; and William Rosier, Langhorne, the secretary.

Mr. Hupp read the minutes of the organization, and also of the first meeting of the association.

In introducing the speaker, Chairman Molloy paid compliment to Mr. Kearney's wide experience in matters of publicity. He told of the background

FRUITS OF CHEMURGY

Developments and discoveries in science and industry calculated to influence American agriculture were outlined and discussed at the sixth annual Chemurgy Conference, sponsored by the National Farm Chemurgy Council, which has just ended a three-day program in Chicago.

One of the subjects discussed was the progress in the growth and use of soy beans, which have become a major farm crop in this country in the past few years.

Another important topic taken up was the dehydrating of castor oil so that it may be used as a substitute for imported tung oil. Chemists have been making researches in this field to hasten the development of a "thinner" to replace tung oil. Incidentally, the growing of the tung nuts has become an important farm activity in the South in recent years.

Another subject on the program was the use of plastics to replace tin, steel and other metals. Chemurgy has already pointed the way to a more abundant life on the farm, but industrial chemistry is still pushing forward. If the use of a 10 per cent mixture of alcohol with the gasoline now in use—and this is made the subject of a new and popular novel—would bring back into cultivation not less than 40,000,000 acres of land; it isn't hard to imagine what it would mean if castor beans and soy beans should find a new and larger market in industry.

The close relation between industry and agriculture has long been established in the minds of those who have studied the question, but it is only in recent years that the improvement of this relation has had the full benefit of research work in industrial chemistry.

WHAT DO THEY TEACH?

When a critic of education suggests that the three R's are being neglected in favor of frills, one almost unconsciously considers the statement an exaggeration, so difficult is it for a person to believe that the teaching of reading, writing and arithmetic are no longer thought to be important.

Now appears a new view on the situation. Miss Doris E. Almy, president of the National Association of Penmanship Teachers and Supervisors, declares that "the public thinks penmanship is a frill, a place to cut down school expenses. Whole systems of handwriting instruction have been discarded and new teachers installed who know nothing of handwriting instruction and whose own writing is bad."

Can it be that the public really thinks penmanship is a frill? Does the public actually believe that the typewriter has removed the necessity for knowing how to write with a pen or pencil? If it does, it has something to learn. Miss Almy herself told her colleagues that poor handwriting is costing American business great losses in actual money through misunderstood or even unreadable sales slips, receipts or other records. In fact, the New York Chamber of Commerce estimates that such losses last year totaled $80,000,000.

Industry and business pay through various taxes a sizable share of the costs of education in the United States. It is scarcely right that they should pay what amounts to an $80,000,000 fine besides just because the school system does not teach pupils how to write legibly.

"Spoiled Girl" by LUCILLE MARSH JOHNSON

SYNOPSIS

Wealthy Sam and Helen Snow object to their daughter, Gabrielle's interest in handsome Peter Parsons because he has no social background. Gabrielle thinks their disapproval unfounded because her father started as a roustabout in the Oklahoma oil fields before he made his fortune in oil. She becomes angry when her mother reminds her of her Uncle Gabriel's will, which stipulates that if Gabrielle marries before she is 21, she is not to receive his money until she reaches 35. With her Boston terrier, Odd, Gabrielle leaves to breakfast at the drugstore where Peter works.

CHAPTER TWO

"You should eat some breakfast, dear," said her mother as Gabrielle was leaving.

"I'll eat something later, Mother," she replied. "I'm not hungry now."

A little later she entered Stanley's Drugstore and took a seat on a high stool. The young man behind the fountain was busy mixing some fancy drink, but he looked up when she sat down.

"Hi, Peter Parsons!" Gabrielle cried gayly.

"Why, hello," said the black haired boy in surprise. He smiled at her, revealing large, even, white teeth. "Gaby, what in the world are you doing downtown at this unearthly hour?"

"For heaven's sake!" she exclaimed vehemently. "That's what the family wanted to know! Can't a self-respecting girl get up early without causing such a hullabaloo?"

He grinned at her, and placed a bright red cherry on top of the frothy, pink preparation before him. Then he carefully put a sickening amount of whipped cream at the side of the cherry.

"Back in a minute," he said to Gabrielle, and took the nauseating concoction to a nearby blonde.

Gabrielle heard the girl say something flippant to Peter, and caught his careless answering remark. He said:

"If that's not the best cherry fluff you ever tasted then let Peter Parsons know!"

She waited impatiently for him to return. Why in the world did anyone want such a thing for breakfast? ... Then, remembering everyone's deep interest in her early rising, she told herself it was no business of hers what anyone else ate at breakfast time!

"Now, Gaby," came Peter's voice, softly caressing, "what's on your mind this morning?"

"Row with the family," stated Gabrielle brightly. "Came down here for my bacon and eggs!"

He laughed and his blue, black fringed eyes twinkled at her. Oh, she adored them, she thought with a little shiver. He asked:

"Is that really what you want?"

"No, Peter. Just coffee, toast, and a huge glass of orange juice, please."

"Coming right up, beautiful," he assured her.

"Why are you by yourself at the fountain?" she asked, when he was cutting oranges in halves.

"Tom doesn't come down until 10 o'clock the mornings I'm on the early shift. He'll be here early in the morning and I'll have till 10 to get here."

"Oh," she said. Then added: "Could I have some raw hamburger for Odd?"

"Oh, is he with you?"

"Lying on the floor as peaceful as a lamb. But—he didn't have any breakfast either."

Going to the refrigerator, Peter brought out a large paper boat filled with ground beef.

"How much will Mr. Odd have?" he inquired.

"About two tablespoonsful," she answered. "He gets his heavy meal at night."

When Gabrielle's breakfast was before her, Peter came around the corner of the fountain and fed Odd. At the moment there were no other customers.

"Why did you call him Odd?" he asked curiously. "Because of his unusual markings?"

"Partly," she admitted. "But, really and truly, it was because of a certain well known writer whom I did so admire."

Peter said jealously, "You must have thought a great deal of the man to name your dog after him." She sobered. "He's dead, Peter, and I've missed him so. I thought almost as much of him as I do of you, Peter."

"Then you really weren't fooling all it takes, you'll be in heaven—I promise you!"

By two, Mr. Snow had returned to his office and Mrs. Snow had taken the car and left, bound for a bridge party. Gabrielle was alone in the house except for Violet, the cook.

She hurried up to her room as soon as her mother was gone. She hadn't wanted to change her dress while her mother was still in the house. Mrs. Snow had inquired as to what she intended doing during the afternoon and Gabrielle had replied vaguely that she wasn't sure.

Choosing a gray and blue figured crepe with lace collar and cuffs she

"Sit right by me," Peter ordered, as his eyes ran quickly over the notes.

last night?" he demanded youthfully.

"I really wasn't fooling, Peter," she replied.

Her hazel eyes became serious again; there was a wistful little smile on her lips:

"I meant every word of it, Peter."

He gazed back searchingly at her for a moment, and then, Mr. Staley came in from the front door. Peter immediately busied himself with wiping off his fountain. Gabrielle applied herself to her cold toast.

After Mr. Staley had said good morning, and strode on back behind the prescription counter, Gabrielle raised her eyes mischievously to Peter. Golden lights danced in them, turning them to pure amber.

"Peter, would you get fired if you were caught stealing?"

He regarded her soberly: "I might, Gaby, and I can't afford to take the chance. I have to live, you know."

There was a too serious sound to his voice to suit Gabrielle.

"Pooh!" she said. "There's lots of jobs as good as this one."

"That's all you know about it," he said, narrowing his eyes at her in disapproval.

"Well—don't look ready to eat me!"

His face softened. "I would like to eat you, Gaby," he said. "I have to work tonight until 11 o'clock, but I'll be off this afternoon from two till five. May I come out?"

"Do, Peter! I'm going by the music store; would you like anything special?"

"It doesn't matter, Gaby," he said, his blue eyes staring at her adoringly. "Just having you and a piano is heaven enough for me."

Gabrielle's face lighted up and she smiled at him radiantly.

"At two then, Peter. And if that's changed to gray hose and pumps, also. Fluffing her fair hair out before her dressing table, she thought she looked very seductive indeed. She wanted to look her best for Peter, because, she asked herself, wasn't she madly in love with Peter?

Shortly after two, Peter Parsons arrived bringing only himself. Gabrielle didn't mind his not bringing her candy or flowers, as the other boys did who came to see her. She knew, because Peter had told her once, that he made only $18 a week from his job at Staley's, and an occasional $5 from playing for a dance.

She took him into the comfortable living room where stood a concert grand piano. It was of rosewood, beautifully carved, and it had been purchased a few years before for Gabrielle. She, however, would never practice and so played scarcely at all.

"Four brand new numbers!" she cried gayly. "Come on, Peter, play them for me."

"Sit right by me," he ordered, turning the sheet music and letting his eyes run quickly over the notes.

Gabrielle sat down on the bench by his side, and Peter, leaning over, kissed her lightly. She closed her eyes and sighed.

"Now, look here, Gaby!" cried Peter. "Do you want to hear these new pieces, or shall I just make love to you?"

Gabrielle heard Violet moving about in the dining room and saw that the French doors were open so that she might look directly in on them.

"Play, Peter!" she exclaimed and, although neither of them knew it, this was to be a magical phrase for Peter Parsons in a very short while.

RECIPES: Those Which Interest Women

COMBAT SPRING FEVER WITH THE RIGHT FOODS

Serve Liver Often To Insure Good Supply of Iron and Other Food Essentials

"That tired feeling" in springtime is sometimes more than imaginary. There is often a real cause which calls for some sort of remedy. Grandmother thought the cure consisted of doses of sulphur and molasses or some other spring tonic. In light of our newer knowledge of nutrition, we now understand that the right food is important in giving us back our energy and sense of well being when we seem to have lost them.

Iron Is Important

One of the food elements which may be lacking in our diet is iron, which is essential to the formation of good red blood. Lean meat is a valuable source of iron, as well as of copper, which aids in the utilization of iron. Richest of food sources of these minerals is liver. That is the reason why food experts recommend that it be served regularly in the diet, especially of children, to insure an adequate supply of iron.

Liver is easy to prepare. It can be sliced and broiled or braised. In a large piece, it is braised. It can be ground or chopped and broiled in patties or it can be baked in a loaf. Liver can also be combined with other foods to make a variety of tempting dishes. It can thus be served as often as desired with no danger of monotony.

Here are recipes for tempting liver dishes, suggested by Inez S. Willson, home economist. You will find that they are appetizing as well as highly beneficial for children or adults.

Liver Rolls with Sausage Stuffing

- 6 large slices liver
- 6 to 8 links cooked pork sausage
- 1 cup fine dry bread crumbs
- 1 small onion, grated
- ½ cup hot water
- Salt
- Pepper
- 6 slices bacon

Pour hot water over the liver slices. Sausage left over from breakfast may be cut into pieces for sausage stuffing. If no cooked sausage is on hand, brown and partially cook the sausage first. Combine with bread crumbs. Season with grated onion, salt and pepper and moisten with hot water. Pile a teaspoonful of bread dressing on each of the scalded liver slices. Roll and wrap a slice of bacon around the outside. Fasten the ends with toothpicks. Place in a casserole. Add one-half cup hot water, cover and cook slowly in a moderate oven for 45 minutes. Remove the cover during the last 15 minutes in order to brown the bacon.

Another tasty liver dish which is quite out of the ordinary but very delicious is liver chow mein. This dish is a variation of the ever-popular Chinese dish of the same name.

Liver Chow Mein

- 1½ pounds sliced liver
- 2 tablespoons lard
- 1 cup diced celery
- ½ cup chopped green pepper
- 1 No. 2½ can tomatoes
- 1 can Chinese vegetables
- 6 tablespoons cornstarch
- 3 tablespoons brown sauce
- 2 tablespoons soy sauce
- Salt and pepper

Dice liver and brown in hot lard. Add celery, green pepper and tomatoes and allow to simmer for about 20 minutes. Add drained Chinese vegetables. When heated through, thicken with cornstarch blended with brown sauce and soy sauce and enough water to make pouring consistency. Season to taste. Serve on Chinese noodles.

Round Steak In Tasty Styles

Round steak is a delicious dish for the family meal and one which satisfies keen appetites. The steaks cut from the round are cooked by braising. They may be cut thick, as Swiss steaks, or cut into thinner slices and used for beef birds.

A somewhat different way of preparing round steak, suggested by Inez S. Willson, home economist, is to wrap the meat around whole carrots instead of bread dressing.

Steak Wrap-arounds

- 1½ pounds round steak
- 6 slices bacon
- 6 carrots
- Salt
- Pepper
- Flour
- 2 tablespoons lard
- ¼ cup catsup
- ½ cup water
- 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce

Have round steak cut one-half inch thick. Cut into six rectangular pieces. Lay a slice of bacon on each piece, the na whole carrot which has been previously cooked in water. Roll up and fasten with a toothpick. Roll in seasoned flour. Brown in hot fat in a frying-pan. Place in a casserole. Make a sauce by mixing the catsup, water and Worcestershire sauce and pour over the meat. Cover and cook in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) for about an hour.

Round steak, also, is delicious when given a slightly spicy flavor. For a different braised steak, rub the steak with mustard and let it stand in a sauce of 4 tablespoons lemon juice, 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, 3 teaspoons melted butter and 4 tablespoons chili sauce. Then brown it, add a small amount of water, cover and cook slowly until done.

By Miss Edna Stephany

The day that the phrase "Count Your Calories" caught the public fancy, the science of nutrition was launched on its practical career. Since then, the interest in calories and energy foods has been overshadowed by the more recent discoveries about vitamins and minerals.

But the vast army of Americans, who are watching their weight, are still counting their calories. They know that the calorie is the unit of measurement that determines the amount of energy a food may yield, and they know that when they get more energy from food than they need the excess is stored as fat.

These people often over-estimate the calories as a unit of measure for the total value of a food. They may forget that the number of calories is no clue to the amount of building materials and regulators—the vitamins and minerals, in the food. The function of food in supplying energy is an important part of nutrition, but it is only part of the story of how the body makes use of food.

In trying to understand how we get energy from food, it is easiest to think of the body as a machine. Anybody who has seen a freight train chugging along the tracks has some idea of how the engine works. He knows that coal is burned to heat water and make steam that drives the pistons and makes the wheels turn.

Strangely enough, the human body can do much the same thing. Its fuel is food—not coal. This food is actually burned inside the body. Although there is no flame or smoke, the fire produces heat. Part of this heat is used to keep the body warm and part of it is created into work energy.

It is this work energy that gives man the energy to chop wood. Even young Bobby needs this energy so he can pull his toy wagon. In other words, the energy from the food is used to perform work.

Energy also is needed for the work of the muscles inside the body, such as the heart and stomach muscles. Even the lungs, the liver, and the kidneys, as well as the tiny glands and very small organs, need food energy to function properly.

One surprising thing about the human body is that it stores up surplus energy as fat. For growing children, it is desirable health insurance for them to be a few pounds overweight. It is also interesting to note that children need more energy foods, in proportion to their size, than grown-ups. Boys and girls need the energy to grow, as well as for all the other functions.

THE STORY OF THE

Baker's Baby

"Yes! Yes! Please! His name is Tony! At Roma Bakery. My baby's so sick, I'm afraid he..." Then she hung up.

A few seconds later, the operator had the father on the line, telling him what had happened.

"Sure, sure! I go right away!" Tony shouted.

Soon the baby was out of danger. A few days later the operator was sitting at the head of the table in Tony Roma's home.

There was a big spaghetti dinner topped off with a huge cake which Tony had baked himself and decorated especially for her. On it, carefully drawn in colored frosting, was a telephone!

This was, of course, an unusual case. Most of the millions of calls we handle each day go through like clockwork—smoothly, easily and quickly. But when the unusual does happen... when someone is in trouble... we're always willing to go out of our way to help.

The first words ever heard over a telephone were a call for help. Ever since that time, the telephone has been helping people in all kinds of ways. Let it help you—in business and household matters—in social affairs—in emergencies and in dozens of every-day chores.

The woman's voice was frantic. But in the torrent of broken English that came over the line, the operator managed to recognize a few words.

"My baby... he's very sick... please help!"

"What doctor shall I call for you?" asked the operator.

"I don't know any doctor! Oh, hurry!"

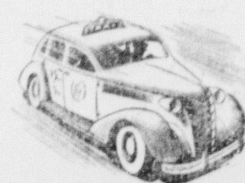

"All right," said the operator. "I'll get you a doctor right away. What's your telephone number and where do you live?"

"My number is 3162. Four-three-nine Burton Street. Oh, thank you so much!"

Quickly the operator called the town's four doctors. But none of them was home. Then she remembered the taxi stand near Burton Street. She called that number. One ring. Another ring. Another—and at last an answer!

"Please rush a cab to 439 Burton Street. Pick up a mother and her baby and rush them to the County Hospital. This is an emergency. Hurry!"

"Four thirty-nine Burton Street? Okay!" Then the operator called back to reassure the frantic mother. "I couldn't find a doctor," she said, "but a taxi is coming to take you and your baby to the hospital. Shall I call your husband?"

LOOKING FORWARD

By Franklyn Waltman
Publicity Director, Republican National Committee

The New Deal has utilized various stratagems to evade the charge that President Roosevelt's Administration has failed in its major task, namely, restoring this country to a sound and lasting economic recovery.

One device has been to compare certain economic statistics for 1932 with those for 1939 and to assert that this proves how successful the New Deal has been, entirely ignoring the fact that the country is much below the level of prosperity and standard of living that existed in the twenties.

But one set of figures which the New Dealers cannot manipulate are those for unemployment. They have tried various explanations, some of which do not make sense, but the cold, stark fact remains that we have with us approximately 10,000,000 unemployed men and women able and willing to work.

Corrington Gill, assistant WPA administrator, is authority for the statement that the country now has 10,000,000 unemployed. It will be recalled that in the 1932 campaign Mr. Roosevelt set the unemployed figure at that time at 10,000,000—so we are just where we were in 1932.

Now Mr. Gill warns that industry cannot absorb "a majority of the country's unemployed within the next five years." In other words, a majority of those now walking the streets looking for jobs are doomed to continue walking the streets futilely looking for jobs for the next five years. A majority of those on relief rolls, receiving meager handouts from government are doomed, according to Mr. Gill, to remain on those relief rolls, long from hand to mouth.

If this is all the hope and promise the New Deal can offer the country after more than seven years of reckless, unprecedented spending and with all the power he wanted in the President's hands, what a sorry spectacle it is! What a spirit of defeatism pervades the New Deal's administrators and leaders!

Of course Mr. Gill is right if, as he undoubtedly believes, President Roosevelt is re-elected for another term. This would mean that he and his policies would dominate the country for approximately another five years, the period mentioned by Mr. Gill. Instead, the way things have been going there probably would be as many unemployed at the end of a Roosevelt third term, as there are today and there were in 1932.

But Mr. Gill is wrong because Mr. Roosevelt will not be the President of the United States after next January. His New Deal brain trust, tinged as it is with socialistic ideas, will not be running the country and strangling business to death for their own ulterior ends.

Solution of the unemployment problem is not an easy one. None claims that. But if business is given a decent chance to go ahead, if employers can find a way to profitably expand, then the army of unemployment rapidly will dwindle. Men and women who want work again will find it and at living wages, instead of meager relief-rolls handouts.

How can this be done? Well, in the first place a start toward this goal can be taken by installing in Washington an Administration that believe that America is still a land of opportunity and by rejecting an Administration which contends that we have come to the end of our economic road. Once the determination to get people back to work takes command in Washington, things will commence to move, even if nothing else were done. But, of course, a great many other things will be done.

A housing program will be stimulated. Public utilities will be encouraged to expand their plant capacity. Railroads will be placed on a basis of stability and will be enabled to purchase the equipment which they so badly need. Little businessmen will be encouraged to start new ventures. Big business will take the risks of experimenting with some of the patents and devices which have lain dormant on its shelves for almost a decade now.

In brief, America will go ahead as it always has gone ahead, by the determination and will of its people, working under a system of free enterprise instead of under the shadows of socialist experiments.

Plans for the sessions were completed by Benjamin G. Eynon, executive vice-president. Early inquiries and reservations, Eynon reported today, indicate that this year's convention will be better than in 1939.

tration placed in a position of having violated the law because it did not have the courage to propose raising the debt limit before an election.

—O—
NOW, when the President first made his statement (ninety days ago) about this recoverable $700,000,000, Senator Byrd challenged its accuracy and asked for details. None has been supplied. Investigation convinced Mr. Byrd that this $700,000,000 is practically nonexistent. Perhaps, some $250,000,000 might be taken over from the RFC, but much more than that would deplete the till of that active agency and even that would have to be extracted over the protest of Mr. Jesse Jones, who knows the money he has is supposed not to be used for current expenses.

—O—
FOR the rest, Senator Byrd has been unable to find any trace of these recoverable balances, assumed by the President as a dependable asset. After diligent but fruitless inquiry, he presented the resolution adopted by the Senate, formally calling upon the Director of the Budget for full information about these alleged balances and about the debts of these independent Government agencies. If the Budget Director is unable to locate these balances or identify them as unobligated, clearly Mr. Roosevelt's whole budget calculation is off and the Congress must face the fact that the legal debt limit will be passed long before the end of the fiscal year. If the Budget Director locates the balances, then it is possible the Administration barely can get by without breaking the limit.

—O—
IN any case, Congress—and the country—are certainly entitled to the facts. If they are not there, then reason can be advanced for not revealing them. If they are not there, then it is pretty dreadful to let Congress go ahead under a false impression. It can be accepted as certain that the Treasury will strain itself to locate this $700,000,000, because if it cannot be located the President is in an obviously painful position. He will have been shown up as telling Congress and the country that $700,000,000 could be added into the credit side of the national ledger when the $700,000,000 simply does not exist. What the New Deal commissioners would do to any bank or private corporation which misled the public or its stockholders in that fashion would be pretty severe. No wonder the New Dealers have toward Senator Byrd the same warm affection they have for a rattlesnake.

—O—
ASSUMING the existence of the $700,000,000, the Senator makes two points—first, that these Government corporations have already incurred debts for which this money is obligated; second, that it is quite indefensible to seize this money for other uses. "To divert funds," he said, "from these corporations when debts have already been incurred by them and impair the value of such obligations merely for the purpose of juggling bookkeeping accounts so as to evade the present legal debt limitation should call for a Congressional investigation. We at least owe an obligation to the public to be candid with respect to public expenditure and not deliberately conceal the real public debt."

A Storage Space For Garden Tools

A GARAGE which is 10 feet wide will accommodate a car, but it will not accommodate the car and garden implements, lawn mower, camping outfit and fishing tackle.

If a garage is going to be a storage house as well as a garage, it should at least be 12 feet wide on the inside. But this is of little help if your garage is already too narrow.

The above illustration is one solution to the storage problem and requires only a simple continuation of the garage roof. Since the new shed does not need to occupy the full length of the garage, the roof has been continued in lattice form to provide a grape arbor and thus kill two birds with one stone. It is simple to proceed one step further and with the aid of a couple of planks provide the new arbor with a seat.

Although vertical matched boards are illustrated in the drawing, regular siding to match either the house or the garage may be substituted. Valuable equipment items can be kept in the locker space without danger of theft when the garage doors are left open.

hunt for locations for "Little Old New York," film which is showing at the Grand Theatre, with Alice Paye, Fred MacMurray, Richard Greene and Brenda Joyce sharing top billing.

For the current film King brought his first assistant, Bob Webb, and a camera crew East, and spent two weeks photographing scenes along the Hudson and against old New York backgrounds. They also gathered a vast amount of material on the history of New York and the career of Robert Fulton, inventor of the steamboat, for use in this robust romantic drama.

Seniors Capture the Half-Mile Chase in A Hectic Fashion

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, Apr. 11.—Tradition was upheld by the Seniors of Bensalem High School when the class of 1940 came out on top over its underclass men in the annual interclass track meet held here yesterday afternoon.

In winning the annual event, the Seniors chalked up 30 1/2 points to barely nose out the Juniors who trailed close behind with 27 5/6 points. The Sophomores finished third with 14 5/6 points while the Freshmen tallied 7 points to finish last.

The half-mile relay race was won by the Seniors with the Juniors finishing second after a hectic chase. And just to complete the chronology of the event, the Sophomores came in third with the "Freshies" last. The classes finished up the relay in that order for several years in a row.

Summaries of the meet:
880 yard run: 1st, McAndrews, Juniors; 2nd, Ashton, Sophomores; 3rd, Mudie, Seniors; 4th, Kahn, Seniors. Time: 2 min. 24 sec.

Broad jump: 1st, Blocker, Sophomores; 2nd, Killian, Juniors; 3rd, Mossbrook, Sophomores; 4th, Lamon, Seniors. Distance: 19 ft. 11 1/2 in.

220 yard dash: 1st, Swan, Seniors; 2nd, Ejdys, Sophomores; 3rd, Mudie, Seniors; 4th, Dunn, Freshmen. Time: 25.7 seconds.

High jump: 1st, Scarborough, Juniors; 2nd, Miller, Seniors; 3rd, Dunn, Freshmen; 4th, triple tie, Whyte, Seniors, DeVoe, Juniors, and Patterson, Sophomores. Height: 5 ft. 2 1/4 in.

Shot put (8 lb.): 1st, Miller, Seniors; 2nd, Rittenhouse, Juniors; 3rd, Whyte, Seniors; 4th, Jones, Juniors. Distance: 40 ft. 9 in.

100 yard dash: 1st, Scarborough, Juniors; 2nd, Lehr, Seniors; 3rd, Carter, Freshmen; 4th, Swan, Seniors. Time: 11.1 seconds.

Half-mile relay: 1st, Seniors (Miller, Lehr, Swan, Mudie); 2nd, Juniors; 3rd, Sophomores; 4th, Freshmen. Time: 2 min. (approximate).

ENTERS SOME TROTTERS IN PENN-JERSEY CIRCUIT

LANGHORNE, Apr. 11.—Even if Easter did not come until late this month, we'd still know it was Spring because 64-year-old Bill Bull, truly the dean of eastern half mile track teamsters of trotters, has entered several horses in the Penn-Jersey circuit. It was announced today. Whenever Spring rolls around, up crops the name of Bill Bull who winter hibernates at Melfa, Virginia, way down on the Eastern Shore.

Each Fall this strawberry and potato farmer returns to Melfa after a season's campaign and says, "That's the last one; I'm gonna retire and stay on the farm and keep the boys workin' the 'tater field.' But he's chose to run again, as Coolidge didn't. The excuse this year that he gives his sons who want to race his dad's mounts themselves, is that he's got a Hambletonian candidate, the first he's ever had. It's Reveler, owned by tobacco magnate W. N. Reynolds, Winston-Salem, N. C.

Reveler was a discard of Grand Circuit trainer Ben White and in late August Bull showed up with Reynolds' Reveler and in three weeks had him good enough to beat Pascha Volo, winner of 13 races. Bull's all wrapped up in this well-bred son of Scotland and he's entered him in the three-year trots of the Penn-Jersey Circuit starting at Langhorne, May 30th, and will take him along easily, pointing toward the $45,000 Hambletonian at Goshen, N. Y. What a fitting climax to 50 years on the turf it would be if this half miler, who only last year won his first Grand Circuit race, would take the "top jocks" of the mile tracks into camp.

Annually, for the past five years about the time they hit Flemington the last week in August . . . Bill says: he's going to turn over his stable to sons Warner and Pete, but by York City . . . first week in October . . . he feels they need another year of seasoning. It's a stock statement each autumn.

That's his excuse, but the real reason is usually that he has picked up some "nickel boss" that he wants to come out with next season and show the boys what he can do and then peddle him off at a high figure.

According to Bull, there is no one in the Bull family but himself that can do the trick, "especially this ole 'tang-a-tang,'" he says. That's a stock excuse too.

Last year it was Highland Prince that he brought back to winning ways, the year before it was Symbol Roy, and a few years ago it was Volodale that set the track record at Langhorne the first race out of the box and then sold for a handsome profit. Another year he had a pair of un-fashionably bred full sisters that he made a near clean sweep with.

This year it may be Reveler, but he won't let him get out of his stable; no sir, he's a "Ham can" as they say of Hambletonian candidates and he's headed for the "Land O' Goshen," via the Penn-Jersey circuit.

BRISTOL SAXONS TO MEET

Tonight at 7.30 the Bristol Saxons baseball team will hold a very important meeting at the home of A. Chalela, 449 Washington street. All members of last year's team, as well as anyone else interested in joining the team, are asked to be present.

Membership Increased 53 During Church Year

Fred Hermann, Jr., having expired. Both were re-elected for terms of three years.

The Rev. Gailey, following the election, gave a summary of activities of the church during the year, including a description of the young people's conference in Maryland. Mention was made of renovations made by the men's Bible class to their meeting room. A report of the pastoral calls, deaths, births, baptisms and marriages during the year, was also given.

Those reporting for the separate groups included: Dr. John J. Hargrave, benevolent treasurer; Fred Hermann, Jr., Sunday School; Mrs. Raymond Boswick, foreign and national missionary societies; Miss Olive Whyatt, Camp Fire Girls; George King, men's Bible class; Mrs. George Bruden, women's Bible class; Miss Blanche Savage, Alpha Bible class; Miss Jean Stetson, choir; William Fry, senior Christian Endeavor.

Refreshments made a pleasant climax to a social hour.

Bucks County Realtors Mark 10th Anniversary

of the speaker and of his 22 months of service overseas in the First World War.

Mr. Kearney, in his introductory remarks, said "There are ten generations of Bucks County blood in my veins." His grandfather, he stated, lived at Bristol.

Then taking up his subject, "How To Publicise Bucks County," the speaker gave many suggestions of value. Mr. Kearney urged the realtors to get Bucks County "talked about." "You have so much undiscovered charm," he suggested the hiring of professional publicity men who would make a survey and develop the fascinating history of Bucks County. "The history of Bucks County is fascinating and much of it has been recovered before it had faded." He praised highly the work of Henry Mercer, of Doylestown, and the Bucks County Historical Society.

The speaker told of the antiquity of Bucks County and the Delaware valley in which he said several years ago relics of a civilization of 15,000 years ago had been uncovered in the sand near Morrisville. "People like to live in a place of glorious memories."

The erection of sign posts not only at the points of ingress of the County, but also at the boundary lines of the various communities on which could be told briefly the history of each community, was one of the suggestions given by the guest speaker.

Mr. Kearney also advocated a traveling art exhibit to be taken through the county and, as the speaker expressed it, "sell the insiders and then attract the outsider."

"God must have loved Bucks County because he kept it as he created it in the beginning," concluded Mr. Kearney.

In a brief business session, James W. Cassidy, Insurance Company of North America, was elected as an affiliate member.

Pitting tribute was paid to the memories of J. C. Everitt, Hulmeville; Horace G. Reeder, Newtown; Wilson K. George, Quakertown; Miss Laura Candy, Langhorne; James F. Blanche, Bristol; and Arthur P. Townsend, Langhorne.
